FREIGHT CAR WHEEL STOPPED ON ARM

Rob't Stanford Recovers from a Dreadful Wound to Be Killed By Train.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
GREENSBORO, N. C., June 22.—A white man named Robert Stanford was shot about two months ago by the female inmate of a disreputable house while he was trying to force his way into the house. For a month he was at the point of death, but finally got well. He died last night, as the result of injuries received by a freight car, one hundred yards from his home, Saturday night, while he was lying upon the track, supposedly drunk.

When he was discovered a wheel of the car had stopped right on his arm. His body was in such a position that the next forward movement of the train would have crushed his head and shoulders. Fearing to trust the engine to back from such a perilous position, the trainmen got force enough together to push the heavily loaded car off the man's arm. His arm was so badly injured that he was conscious enough to beg to be taken home.

Physicians found his wrist cut off and one shoulder dislocated. He lived through the day and died last night from nervous shock. He was a native of this city and he was conscious enough to beg to be taken home.

When Stanford was shot some time ago he lay all night in a clump of bushes, the woman who shot him being unaware of having struck him, and was accidentally found next morning, alive, but not expected to live through the day, a pistol ball having gone clear through his body.

The girl tells a sad story. She says her mother, a widow, has been drinking and ill treating her and now has deserted her. She left her unhappy home to go to Baltimore and arrived in this city last Saturday by the Ocean View route. She seemed to be disappointed by the breaking of her mother's promise to take her to a new home. She was asked a Mr. Kaufman, who has a store at No. 60 Church Street, where she could reach her mother. Mr. Kaufman's suspicions were aroused and he took her to see Superintendent W. G. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
COMOR, VA., June 22.—Mr. Charles Lindeman, of Colonial Beach, became despondent several days ago, and, tired of life, swallowed a quantity of "rough on rats," which proved fatal. During a thunder storm few evenings ago, three whiskey saloons in Colonial Beach were struck by lightning. The proprietor of one of the places was stunned.
